DISLIKE NEW CLOTHES.

Trainers of Animals Run Risks in Appearing in Them.

"It is a strange thing," said a well known trainer of animals, "how many outbreaks and accidents have resulted from a trainer wearing a strange costume. Quite recently a lady performer who had made some alterations in her dress had a narrow escape. The tiger with whom she usually appeared turned sulky from the start, and at last absolutely refused to do one of the tricks. Its mistress urged, and threatened to no purpose, and finally attempted to use the whip. The moment she attempted to do so the infuriated animal flew at her, and if it had not been for a bear-bound which was performing with them, Miss S. would probably have lost her life. The brave dog snarled at the tiger and distracted its attention until his mistress had succeeded in making her escape. Unfortunately he was injured by the tiger's claws."

"How do you account for such outbreaks?"

"The tiger evidently did not recognize his mistress in her change of costume. As a rule, very few alterations are made. The same dog always appears in the same act, and so on, the idea of acquaintance and familiarity thus being maintained. Why, even if a hat or a wrap happens to be within reach outside the arena the animal is sure to see it at once, and if it can get at it will promptly tear it to pieces."

"Have there been many such accidents recently?"

"About a year ago a lion tamer in New York wore a full dress suit instead of his usual military costume at one of the performances. As soon as the lion saw the change of clothing he made direct at him. Now lions do not, like tigers, try to kill instantly, but strike out with their paws to knock their enemy down. In this case the lion's claws caught the trainer's face, inflicting severe injuries. But he is still at the business, though the scars of the struggle are very plainly visible."

"Do these outbreaks ever have fatal results?"

"Sometimes. Another lady performer made an alteration in her dress that displeased the tiger with whom she was acting, whereupon the savage beast pounced upon her, killing her instantly. This animal has never been allowed to perform since."—Nineteenth Century.

A Typical English Inn.

The inn was set close to the river, and although the highroad ran a mile farther inland the Angel inn had the air of having seen more stirring times. The little inn sitting room was parlor and taproom in one; its chairs opened friendly arms, bits of old silver gleamed on the mantelpiece, and low settles, cupboards and tables of antique make were suggestive of the droll and gone figures that had populated the cozy room. In the main of the general host there was the welcome which imagination lends to mine host of the coaching period.—"A Cruise on the Norfolk Breads" in Century.

A Dangerous Remedy.

Bicarbonate of potassa is a remedy in common use in throat troubles. But it is not generally known that it should be used with discretion. A strong 82-year old man at Brannschweig, instead of merely dissolving a little of the potassa in water for a gargle, poured a large quantity into a glassful of water and then swallowed the dose. He died a few hours later after terrible suffering.—New York World.

For Females Only.

Mr. Canstie—By the way, dear, let me give you a point about letter writing. Mrs. C.—What is it, dear?

Mr. C.—Hereafter always write your postscript first, and it will save you the trouble of writing your letter.—Richmond Dispatch.

The Real Labor.

"Yes," said Mrs. Emmmann, "I learned to cook without any difficulty at all. There was only one trouble about it."

"What was that?"

"Educating my husband's appetite."—Washington Star.

LOOK OUT FOR BREAKERS AHEAD

when pimples, eruptions, boils, and like manifestations of impure blood appear. They wouldn't appear if your blood were pure and your system in the right condition. They show you what you need—a good blood-purifier, that's what you get when you take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It carries health with it. All Blood, Skin and Scalp Diseases, from a common Itch, or Eruption, to the worst Scrofula, are cured by it. It invigorates the liver and rouses every organ into healthful action. In the most stubborn forms of Skin Diseases, such as Salt-rheum, Eczema, Tetter, Ringworm, Scald-head, and kindred ailments, and with Scrofula, in every shape, and all blood-taints, no matter from what cause arising, it is an unequalled remedy.

SCROFULOUS ABSCESSSES.

Mrs. BELLE SWENNEY, of Flat Top, Mercer Co., W. Va., writes: "About four years ago I took scrofula, and did everything that doctors and others prescribed, but only got worse. Several abscesses formed about my neck and breast, discharging a quantity of matter. I got so weak I could scarcely walk about the house. I read all the medical works I could get hold of, and among the rest, read some of your works. You described my case, and recommended Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery with his 'Pleasant Pellets.' So I procured some and commenced using them and soon began to mend. In six months my sores were all healed up. I am forty-five years old and believe I am as stout as I ever was in my life. I used about one dozen bottles of the Golden Medical Discovery with the 'Pellets,' and used nothing else after I began using your medicines."

President Cleveland has sent a special message to Congress on the Venezuelan question. In his annual message he called attention to the pending controversy between Great Britain and Venezuela, and stated the substance of representations made by this Government to Great Britain, with suggestions why the dispute should be submitted to arbitration, and inquiring whether it would be so submitted. The answer of the British Government has since been received, and the proposition of this Government to settle the controversy by arbitration is declined, and it is also suggested by the British Prime Minister that the United States should not seek to apply the Monroe doctrine to the pending dispute because it does not embody any principle of international law which is founded on the general consent of nations.

The President, fresh from his duck hunt on the Chesapeake, and fortunately not from Wall street, replies with vigor to the arguments of Lord Salisbury. He says the course to be pursued by this Government in view of the present condition, does not appear to admit of serious doubt. Having labored for years to induce Great Britain to submit the dispute to arbitration and now being apprised that it will not do so, nothing remains but to accept the situation, to recognize its plain requirements and deal with it accordingly. It is now incumbent upon the United States to take measures to determine with sufficient certainty of justice the new divisional line. Inquiry to that end should be conducted carefully and judiciously, and in order that such investigation should be prosecuted in a thorough manner, the President suggests that Congress make adequate appropriation for the expenses of a commission to make the necessary investigations and report with the least possible delay. When such report is made and accepted it will, in his opinion, be the duty of the United States to resist by every means in its power, as a willful aggression upon its rights and interests, the appropriation by Great Britain of the lands, or assume governmental jurisdiction over any country, which, after investigation, we have determined of right belongs to Venezuela.

These recommendations are American, and in making them the President says he is fully alive to the responsibilities incurred and keenly realizes all the consequences that may follow. He is, nevertheless, firm in the conviction that while it is grievous to contemplate the two great English-speaking peoples of the world as being otherwise than friendly competitors in the march of civilization, and worthy rivals in all arts of peace, there is no calamity which can befall this great nation, which equals that which follows submission to wrong and injustice and consequent loss of National self-respect and honor, beneath which is spread and defended the people's safety and greatness.

That is the first message ever sent by President Cleveland to Congress that deserves and certainly will receive the hearty approval of every person worthy the name of American citizen. It lays down a platform on which all parties can stand, and to the maintenance of which every citizen, regardless of politics or creed, should give full and free support, as it embodies the principles enunciated by President Monroe in 1823 and which are based upon the theory that every nation on this continent shall have its rights protected.

DOES NOT LIKE SILVER TALK.

The Carson News is evidently displeased with those who agitate the silver question. In a recent issue it says: "If the papers of Nevada had spent the energy toward building up the State and getting outside capital invested here, that they have been looking about the free coinage of silver, their efforts would not have been in vain and results would have been the consequence."

Will the News, whose editor the JOURNAL learns has spent about a year and a half in Nevada, be so kind as to inform the people of the State what in his opinion would advance their interests more than the free coinage of silver? He does not howl about free coinage, in fact he barks only at those who favor silver. In what respect has he benefitted the State or built it up more than those who assert that in justice to the farmers, miners and workmen of the country generally the coinage of gold and silver should be free at the mints, as the founders of the Government provided? Has Carson increased in wealth and population since he assumed control of the News and does not "howl" for free coinage? He will not deny, if he knows anything whatever about the desolation wrought in the mining towns and many of the agricultural valleys of Nevada by the adoption of the gold standard, that the restoration of silver to its historic place as a money metal would not do more to make the State prosperous than anything he ever suggested. Why then not agitate free coinage until everybody in the country, including himself, is aroused to the importance of the question to the extent of supporting no party that is not unequivocally in favor of it? The success of the gold parties, it is true, would furnish a few with comfortable stalls at the public crib, but the success of a free coinage party would furnish tens of thousands with employment and enable those who are engaged in agricultural pursuits not only in Nevada, but in the other States, to sell their products at more than the cost of production.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

Interest in the President's Message. WASHINGTON, December 17.—The Senators showed the keenest interest in the reading of the message. There was hardly a vacant seat on the Republican side and but few absentees on the Democratic side. As the reading closed there was a hearty hand clapping from all quarters of the chamber, Chandler leading in the demonstration on the Republican side. Veterans of the Senate say it was the most spontaneous demonstration in their recollection. The message and the accompanying documents were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and at 1.15 the Senate adjourned.

The House devoted itself to-day to discussing a proposition to have two Election Committees instead of one, the Venezuelan message being opened in the meanwhile. This caused Crisp to exclaim: "There is an important message from the President relating to Venezuela lying on the table, and yet this Republican Congress enters upon a partisan action, delaying the consideration of the President's message. Hullick of Ohio was quickly on his feet with the inquiry as to whether the House or the President's ducking excursion had delayed the message on the Venezuelan question."

There was a round of laughter and applause from the Republican side. "There is the message," said Crisp, "it lies unheeded, and yet it is a frank, honest and manly support of the Monroe doctrine."

Both sides joined in applause at mention of the Monroe doctrine.

TELEGRAPHIC NOTES.

Louis Braveman, a San Francisco jeweler, has failed, it is said, for a quarter million dollars.

The Cubans are advancing and have crossed the Spanish military lines, proving that the Spaniards have been unable to check their progress.

Geo. Monroe, convicted of an attempt to suborn little girls at Portland, Or., was yesterday sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. Monroe laughed when the judge pronounced sentence.

It is definitely stated that Harrison will accept the nomination for President should it be tendered him. It is not yet known whether he proposes to marry Mrs. Dimmock. The Indiana delegation will not present his name at the convention, but some other State will do so.

Frank Wilson, a desperado, who shot and badly wounded a soldier and two police officers in his saloon in San Diego Monday night, surrendered to the authorities yesterday. The police guarded the saloon until Wilson surrendered. He delivered a loaded Winchester rifle and a Colt's revolver to the police.

The President has sent a special message to Congress on the Venezuelan question in which he says the British Government has refused to submit the boundary dispute to arbitration. The President upholds the Monroe doctrine and recommends the adoption of vigorous measures to maintain it in the settlement of the Venezuelan boundary dispute.

The motormen and conductors of the Union Traction Company of Philadelphia went out on strike yesterday morning. The company employs 6,000 men, two-thirds of whom are members of the Employees Association. The men demand $2 for ten hours' work, protection from the weather and the recognition of their organization. There has been much violence. The women plugged the switches and scores of men have been arrested for cutting trolley wires. Strike sympathizers are doing most of the mischief.

Should Not Be Permitted.

In the proceedings of the Board of Commissioners the following occurs: "J. F. Aitken asked permission to locate an oil tank for the Standard Oil Company near the present oil house. The Trustees of the Fire Department objected unless it was covered over with a brick building. The Board sustained the objection."

As a property holder I praise the action of the Fire Department, but it is too conservative. No buildings holding or storing explosives or combustible oil, especially gasoline, are tolerated within city limits in all municipal communities, whether the building be of brick or otherwise. In Virginia City, for instance, the oil house has been removed far beyond the outskirts and the powder house is a mile or two from town. Why should they be tolerated here to the danger and detriment of my property and possibly the lives of my family? A coal oil adjunct is proposed to be permanently tacked on to this section of property holders, solely for the benefit of the Standard Oil Company and its devotees, Mr. Aitken.

How would it have been had it been proposed to establish it in Powning's Addition? The powers that be here in Reno would have been up at once in arms against it and would have sought refuge by vaccination against it. We people of this section of Reno propose to stoutly defend our rights. Neither explosives nor combustibles shall, without a stout legal contest, be stored within the city limits in our adjacency.

The history of Butte City's explosion should not be repeated here. Time and time again have Indians and cigarette smokers been driven from before the oil house here, where every wagon loading and unloading, necessarily besprinkles oil. The earth and platform are saturated with it. It only needs a match to repeat the tragedy of Butte, Reno cannot afford that.

CHARLES J. FRISCH.

Marine, Made a Follies.

Uptil some recent discoveries by Professor Saunders of Vevey, Switzerland, it was not suspected that fishes were affected by music. In a shallow inlet Professor Saunders found a queer arrangement of strings in the water which demanded examination. Viewing the affair from a distance with a water telescope he saw that some fishes, which had, by the usual painful method, gained possession of several fragments of fishline, were passing them around two sticks thrust into the water by some fisherman. When the strings were struck, the stakes were wedged apart by piling stones between them so as to tighten the strings, three or four fishes rolling a stone along the bottom with their noses. The operation was necessarily slow. The professor watched it at intervals for two or three days.

Finally, when all was ready, the largest fish seized a stick or bone, and, using it as a plectrum, twanged the strings with it, while the other fishes gathered around to hear the music. Of course, there was none, as the submerged strings refused to sound. After several trials the fishes tore up their water harp in disgust. They had probably caught their idea from Aimee Sauser, the professor's daughter, who was in the habit of playing a harp by the bank. —Boston Journal.

Duchess and Fishwife.

An old fishwife, one of the order that was more frequently seen a dozen years ago than today, and who runs about barelegged in a very brief tartan petticoat, with a creel of fish upon her shoulders, had been often promised by an ally in the servants' hall that she should some time see the young duchess in her own home. She was therefore posted one day in a distant corner of the hall, from which she looked out in obvious discontent as the lady and her guests filed in to dinner. When the dining room door had closed behind them, she was asked what she thought of the duchess.

"The duchess!" she repeated in the shrill tones of supreme disdain. "Dinna ye try for to make me believe my ain laddy was there. I saw a muckle bray vives tricked out in shining stones and feathers, each with her mon by her side, but my bonnie duchess wassa' wi' them. Na, na, dinna ye try for to mak me believe that."

It then inspired that she was looking out for a tall, willowy form, clad in simple homespun, with a sailor hat poised lightly on a dainty head, such as she saw when she trudged to the rear of the castle with her creel, and that she would not have the tara and satin train at any cost. —Madame.

An Even Thing.

"My friend," he said in the soft tremolo which bespeaks the mendicant, "I'm in hard luck."

The man whom he was endeavoring to touch only walked the faster.

"I'm hungry and sleepy and I ain't got a thing ter eat nor any place ter lay my head."

"I haven't anything for you I've heard all that before."

"Heard it before! Why, look 'ere, mister, this ain't no prize contest for originality. And if it is, you ain't got none the best of 'em," he went on, slackening his pace, and dropping behind. "I've heard what you said before 'bout 'leven thousand times at the lowest calculation." —Washington Star.

He served with distinction in the Union Army during the war and after the surrender of General Lee returned to peaceable pursuits. He has resided in Kansas for years and practices medicine, having graduated a regular M. D. He has been honored by many positions of trust by his fellow citizens and filled them with credit to himself and satisfaction to his constituents. Colonel Pratt, who is a brother of H. J. Pratt, visited Nevada several years ago and made many friends during his visit who would be pleased to have him elected Vice President, as he is an accomplished advocate of free coinage.

CARSON MINT SHORTAGE.

SECOND TRIAL OF JAMES HENEY—FOURTEENTH DAY.

Professor Price Clogs the Wheels of Justice Temporarily, but Arrives.

(Correspondence of the JOURNAL.)

CARSON, December 17, 1895.

At the opening of court this morning Judge Hawley said: "I am authoritatively informed that the train from California, due this morning, is about four hours late, also that Professor Price, the important witness in this case, is thus delayed in arriving. This places us in a predicament which I submit to the attorneys on both sides for solution."

Woodburn suggested that pending the arrival of the witness the prosecution start in on the rebuttal, introducing witnesses, etc.

Clarke objected on the ground that the testimony of Price was materially necessary before the rebuttal could come in properly.

In view of these propositions his Honor excused the jury and ordered a recess till 2 o'clock. But, said he, all will please retain their seats until after the jury retires, as I have a few words of important business to set forth.

After the jury got out he said: "During the last two or three days my attention has been called to the proposition that parties deeply interested in this suit have been and still are using their best endeavors to intimidate certain witnesses, and these witnesses ask the protection of the Court. Any such action thus complained of is in direct contempt of court, and all persons engaged in such description of conduct if brought before me will be adjudged guilty of contempt and adequately punished therefor. I am convinced that there is something of the kind going on and it is the duty of everyone knowing of it to come and say so and I will do the rest."

At the afternoon session opening his Honor said: "Here we are again in the same predicament. The train did not connect, and Professor Price is not present and not likely to be before evening. What will the attorneys suggest in the matter?"

Woodburn suggested that as Price would arrive a night session might be held.

His Honor remarked: "I am in regular laborious session from day to day during court hours and otherwise, and am not in the best of health, but if the attorneys say so we will hold the night session."

General Clarke said the prosecution had always been on hand and would meet the proposition of the defense, and a recess was taken till 7 o'clock, P. M.

Professor Thomas Price arrived on the afternoon local all right, therefore will be present at the night session.

LOCAL AND GENERAL NEWS.

News From Here There and Every-where.

The Wadsworth Dispatch says the ex-State Treasurer has not yet explained why he swapped gold for brand new silver dollars.

The price of horse hides is now 75 cents each. When they began killing horses in Nevada they were worth $1.50. The present prices will not pay for the shooting and skinning.

The San Francisco Chronicle will celebrate the coming Christmas by presenting a silver cup to every baby born on that day in the States of Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada and the Territory of Arizona.

Good miners out of work are said to be scarce in DeLamar. Those already employed can get work by asking for it. Idle men of any description are not numerous either, but the unemployed may be classed as general laborers and have no general line of work.

The National Christian Association in session in the Methodist Episcopal Church at Oakland, California, has for its object the creation of public sentiment against secret societies, which are believed by the members of the association to be in opposition to the best interests of American life. The society is fast gaining strength.

Martin Hakyen and ex-Selectmen Herman Bamberger, Joseph B. Morris and John P. Cahoon of Salt Lake City are indicted for a misdemeanor, it being believed that they entered into a conspiracy to pay $54,973.85 to A. H. Andrews & Co. for furniture for the county building which was worth no more than $26,000, and conspired to have warrants issued to Andrews & Co. for the $54,973.85.

Truckee's Ice Palace.

Uncle George Schaeffer returned from Truckee yesterday. He says work is progressing admirably on the palace. It is framed substantially with lumber and covered with wire netting and on this water is sprayed and soon turns to ice. The operation of spraying was commenced on Monday evening and Uncle George says it already begins to look fine. Fir trees of pretty shape are placed in conspicuous places about the structure and are arranged so as to make pretty decorations. The Truckee people are enthusiastic and will make not only the palace but every detail of the Winter festival a grand success.

AN OLD SETTLER PASSES AWAY.

W. R. Chamberlain, One of the Builders of Reno, Surrenders to the Inevitable.

Notwithstanding that it has been known for some weeks that W. R. Chamberlain was very ill and it was doubtful whether he would ever be able to leave his bed, the announcement on the street yesterday afternoon that he had died at 1:50 P. M. was a shock to his many immediate friends and also to those who had but a slight acquaintance with him, although knowing him quite well by sight and reputation.

He was one of Reno's earliest settlers, removing here in the year 1868 from the old Chamberlain Station on the Dutch Flat overland stage road shortly after the first falls of the Central Pacific were laid through this valley, and when Reno could only boast of two or three canvas tents and the old Lake House at the crossing of the Truckee. He superintended the construction of the first Depot Hotel, afterwards taking charge of it as landlord and conducting it for many years. This hostelry had more than a Coast reputation, and the name of W. R. Chamberlain was and has been almost as familiar to every man, woman and child in Reno as their own. During the time he kept the Depot Hotel, he suffered two great fires which brought on business reverses which finally forced him to give up the fight and retire.

He was a very positive man in his opinions, but still liberal and kind hearted to a fault. Deserving charity always found a friend in him and was never turned away. He had a big heart and at the sight of misfortune or suffering on the part of his fellow man his seeming gruff nature would be moved and his hand was always extended in aid of any deserving object.

He has seen Reno grow from a sagebrush plain to a fair sized city and although others have prospered and built up fortunes on the foundation he helped to lay, yet he rarely complained, if at all, and then only at his poor health, often remarking that "if he was well and strong he would not ask any odds of anyone."

For the last few years he has struggled manfully against business reverses and ill health, but has always shown an indomitable will to be independent and make his own way. For a helpmate he has had more than money or riches could purchase and even when former friendships grew cold, a faithful and loving wife has stood by his side in all trouble and to the last held his hand and spoke words of cheer, when the final summons came that called him from her.

To the bereaved wife the JOURNAL extends its most earnest sympathy.

W. R. Chamberlain was a native of New York State, and aged 63 years and one month.

The funeral will take place from Masonic Hall on Friday at 1 o'clock under the auspices of Reno Lodge F. & A. M., Dewitt Clinton Commandery, Knights Templar, acting as escort, both of which orders the deceased was an honored member.

THE PURSE FOUND.

An Advertisement in the "Journal" Brings Immediate Returns.

On Monday afternoon Geo. Wedekind lost a purse containing something over $20 and a postoffice key. He came to the JOURNAL office and left a 50-cent advertisement. He had faith in his fellow man and a belief that most of them are honest. He was quite sure that the purse and contents would be returned to him and his confidence in the human family was rewarded yesterday afternoon when Nelse Coffin of the S. P. Co. walked into the JOURNAL office and returned the purse and contents. Nelse picked it up at the corner of the Poor Man's Clothing Store and yesterday morning read the ad. and hastened to make glad the heart of the owner, who is a poor man. This is the second experience that Nelse has had in finding and returning lost valuables to the owner that have been advertised in the JOURNAL.

The Discovery Saved His Life. M. G. Caillonette, Druggist, Beaverville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail, and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use, and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at S. J. Hodgkinson's Drug Store.

Every bottle is guaranteed. Sold by S. J. Hodgkinson.

A NEW ELM INSECT.

(Newspaper bulletin No. 19.)

The few trees used for shade and ornament in Western Nevada have, up to the present time, been very free from destructive insect pests. Several different kinds of insects affect these trees more or less injuriously, but none of them, with a possible single exception, have proved actually destructive. But now an additional species has come to our knowledge as very quietly but very surely killing the beautiful elms about the State Capitol at Carson. The apparent very insignificance of the insects has resulted in their being undisturbed and perhaps even unnoticed by those frequenting the Capitol grounds until now, after at least several years of undisputed sway, they have become thoroughly established upon nearly all the elms of the grounds. Some of the larger smooth bark trees are succumbing to the effect of these insects, and some of the young trees bid fair to share the same fate unless the progress of the pest is checked.

The history of the introduction of the insect into this State is and probably will continue to be unknown. So far as is known, the trees about the Capitol and the adjacent streets are the only ones affected by this insect within the State. As the older trees seem to have been attacked earliest and are first yielding to the countless number of insects preying upon them, we may very safely infer that they were the source of first infection.

Whatever may have been the source of introduction, the insect seems to have become firmly established and now well able to prosper if allowed to continue unchecked. Like many other noxious animals and plants in this country, this insect is a contribution from Europe. It was first discovered in the United States ten or eleven years ago, when it appeared in New York. Since then it has appeared at Boston, New York City, Washington, and even while this article is in preparation the announcement of its appearance in Michigan is received. So far as the writer knows, this is the first recorded appearance of this insect on the Pacific Coast.

The insect is related to the various destructive scale insects which are notably injurious to fruits in California. It is not a true scale insect, however, being more closely allied to the mealy bugs, whose habits are somewhat similar to those of the scale insects, but which differ essentially from the latter in not producing a protecting scale covering. The presence or absence of this scale is all important in the consideration of remedies, which are very effectually resisted by the true scale insects.

The life history of this insect, technically known as Gossyparia nini, briefly stated, is as follows: The young lice are born in early summer, probably mostly in June. They then scatter to the leaves, where they remain until August, when they return to the limbs and branches, where they seek the protection of cracks in the bark for hibernation during winter. In early spring the male lice produce cocoons, from which they soon emerge as perfect winged insects. After mating in May the males disappear and the females become permanently fixed upon the bark, when the life cycle is completed.

The presence of the insects is indicated by the bodies of the old females, each surrounded by a white waxy ring secreted by the developing insects. These bodies are usually commonest on the lower side of the limbs. They may be in groups or in rows following longitudinal cracks in the bark. The cocoons of the males are small, white, oblong bodies, and are usually found in clusters upon the bark, though often occurring singly in minute crevices.

The attacks of this insect seem to be confined to the elms alone, at least in this country. In France it has been found on the alder, however. Judging from the known history of this insect, one may expect it to continue a pest on the elm alone, or at least not prove injurious to the other trees now employed for shade and ornament in this country.

Bulletin No. 23, of the Nevada Agricultural Experiment Station, about to be issued will treat more fully of this insect and its remedies.
